

Exploring the Mind

Lecture Series 2020-2021

October 23, 2020

Robert Zatorre, Ph.D., Montreal Neurological Institute, McGill University
Why do we love music? A view from cognitive neuroscience

December 4, 2020

Ian H. Gotlib, Ph.D., Department of Psychology, Stanford University
Understanding depression: A neurodevelopmental perspective
(co-sponsored by the Program in Human Development and Family Studies)

December 11, 2020

Koraly Perez-Edgar, Ph.D., Department of Psychology, Pennsylvania State University
Temperament's fingerprint: Electrophysiological and attentional markers for socioemotional development
(co-sponsored by the M.I.N.D. Institute)

January 15, 2021

Roberto Cabeza, Ph.D., Center for Cognitive Neuroscience, Duke University
Memory representations and networks
(co-sponsored by the Memory and Plasticity Program)

February 19, 2021

Chris Baker, Ph.D., Laboratory for Brain and Cognition, NIMH
Making sense of the world: People, places, and things
(co-sponsored by the Center for Vision Science)

March 5, 2021

Michael S. Gazzaniga, Ph.D., Sage Center for the Study of the Mind, UCSB
Trainee Hosted Speaker
Coordinating modules in a specialized brain
(co-sponsored by the Center for Neuroscience)

April 2, 2021

Eveline Crone, Ph.D., Program in Neurocognitive Developmental Psychology, Erasmus University, The Netherlands
Adolescent brain development: A window of opportunity for social-affective engagement
(co-sponsored by the Department of Psychology)

April 16, 2021

Steven O. Roberts, Ph.D., Department of Psychology, Stanford University
Trainee Hosted Speaker
Race: A developmental story
(co-sponsored by the Graduate Program in Psychology)

May 7, 2021

Gina Kuperberg, M.D., Ph.D., Department of Psychology, Tufts University, and MGH
Does hierarchical predictive coding mediate language comprehension? Evidence from multimodal neuroimaging
(co-sponsored by the Language Group)

All lectures will be held from 12:10-1:30 on Fridays via Zoom (links to be sent later)

See <http://mindbrain.ucdavis.edu> for schedule updates

To request ADA Services for any of these lectures contact us at cmbadmin@ucdavis.edu or (530) 754-4551

The Center for Mind and Brain is a Campus-wide UC Davis Initiative